

'MY DAILY ROUTINE IS DEVISED TO ENABLE ME TO BE CREATIVE'

Logan is dedicated to his arts. "I've streamlined my life to enable me to produce my work. I don't drink, and my daily routine, which includes early-morning yoga classes, is devised to enable me to concentrate wholly on being creative," he says.

Later, he poses for his portrait in a vivid pink velvet suit, which was tailor-made for him in India out of cloth normally used for Bollywood backdrops. "People often think of me at Christmas," he confides, "because my work is colourful and glittering, but it should be enjoyed every day; it is a celebration of the joy of life".

And after just a few hours in Andrew Logan's company, within the walls of his colourful and bejewelled home, your spirits do feel uplifted, making the return to the grey, wet South London streets outside just that little bit more bearable. ■

All That Glitters! is at Scream, 34 Bruton Street, London W1 (020-7493 7388) until 22 December

The base of the pink staircase, leading to office and bedroom

